In “The Wretched and the Beautiful,” E. Lily Yu presents human reactions to aliens who are both different from us and similar to us, exploring the choices the humans make. Pair “Where the World’s Refugees Are” with “The Wretched and the Beautiful” to give students a broader perspective of where refugees have sought safety in the world, as well as how they have been received. Ask students to compare and contrast the treatment of groups of refugees with the treatment of the “wretched aliens.” How do people’s attitudes in “Where the World’s Refugees Are” resemble or differ from the humans’ perspectives in “The Wretched and The Beautiful”?
